GRAMLING GENEALOGY

Descended from Isaac Gramling, born 1805

and

Mary Hornberger, born 1808

One of the earliest Gramlings came to Orangeburg, South Carolina, about 1735 from Bavaria through the Port of Hamburg, Germany. Adam Gramling came from Germany about 1750. A news item from a Columbia, South Carolina, newspaper, "The State" of August 23, 1959, lists Gramlings from six states present at a family reunion held at the White House Methodist Church seven miles north of Orangeburg. Displayed at the reunion was a pewter tray, the only known memento brought by the original Gramling, now owned by Mrs. Tomlinson. Andrew C. Gramling Sr. is the proud owner of a family tree, originally blue, printed in 1922 for the first reunion of the Adam Gramling and wife's (Elizabeth Christiana Gassoway) descendants. They had ten children.

Rev. Martin Luther Gramling, born 1765

Adam Gramling Jr., born 1768

Christian Gramling, born 1771

Michael and Elizabeth Gramling (twins), born 1773

Richard and Kate Gramling (twins)

Andrew Gramling, born 1783

Rev. John Gramling, born 1785

Israel Gramling

They all appear to have settled in the South. From Pennsylvania Society of S.A.R. (Sons of American Revolution) comes a listing which has not been identified:

Adam Gramlin, 1740-1790, Commissary General of Military Stores, married Chloanna Gassaway.

This coincidence of the two Adam Gramlings marrying two Gassaways (Gassoways) is something to ponder with one in South Carolina and one in Pennsylvania. Approximate birth years for Adam who immigrated prior to 1735 and the Adam born 1740 indicate a generation apart. Were they first together, then one separated to the other location?

William Penn visited Germany in 1671 and again in 1677 to invite German families to colonize Pennsylvania. While there had been some German immigration to America almost continually since some time in the seventeenth century, the mass immigration of Germanic people came in the first half of the eighteenth century. At this time the emigration from the Rhineland to Pennsylvania was at its peak. It did not slow down until the time of the French and Indian War in America. The Gramling's European origin is remembered by family as being in Bavaria to which part of the Palatinate (Pfalz) belonged at various times. Central European borders were fluid. The Gramling and Hornberger's departures were through the Port of Rotterdam near the mouth of the Rhine River in the Netherlands, as were most other emigrations from Switzerland, Lowland Germany, and the Rhine Valley, although some did come through Amsterdam and other ports, and not all disembarked at Philadelphia. Normally, the ship stopped at an English port before crossing the Atlantic. This Palatinian group which settled in Pennsylvania is mistakenly referred to as "Pennsylvania Dutch," probably based on "Deutsch," the German name for "Germany." Properly, the people were "Pennsylvania Germans." They are a different group from other German immigrations.

Ships' lists of passengers from Germany sometimes included names of wives and children over 16 years of age; young children were not listed. Frequently, merely the male's name appeared although, in fact, wife and children had accompanied him. Related persons and friends inclined to journey together or follow on a later ship and to settle together. So many Palatinian immigrants swelled Pennsylvania's eastern counties and Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, alarm arose in fear of German dominance. They settled together, formed their own schools and churches, retained their "agricultural methods, folklore, customs, costumes, architecture, music and crafts" and their own language well into the nineteenth century. They were a very independent, hard-working, pious group.

Two centers for obtaining emigration permits were Zweibruecken (somewhat inland) and Speier on the Rhine River. From there, travel on the river was probably by barge, powered by tow horses from the river's bank. This journey lasted three or four months due to each petty state along the route requiring payment for passage through its territory which brought the passengers to Philadelphia in the autumn and at the start of cold weather. Most of the emigrants were miserably poor, their possessions amounting to content of the "immigrants' chests" containing some clothing, perhaps a few pieces of gold, a Bible, other small items. Not infrequently robbers, imposters, or unscrupulous ships' masters relieved them of these chests and what little money they possessed once they were under sail or upon arrival in America.

Germany, and particularly the Lowland, had been devastated by the Thirty Years' War ending in 1648. That was a mere spark compared with Louis XIV's aggression between 1674-1697, with a few years' intermission. In the end, three day's grace was granted the native people to depart, after which everything was burned including the crops and trees in order to deny sustenance to the victorious armies. During these years the Electorate had encouraged immigration by the persecuted Walloons, Mennonites, and Huguenots in order to replenish the devastated country. This encouragement from the end of the Thirty Years' War, including education for work, in combination with Luther's concept "that individual Christians should obey God's will by fulfilling demands of his occupation" developed the German people into the most industrious and hard working on earth. About the turn of the eighteenth century the absolutist ruler expelled the three religious groups, previously invited. In 1709 Queen Anne of England sent ships to bring the suffering souls to England whereby many native Palatinians joined the migration overwhelming her land. At one count there were as many as thirty-two thousand. Eventually, by dispersal, they were settled elsewhere, many to British Colonies, Ireland, and other countries. The remaining Protestants in the Rhine Valley and Palatinate bore minority status. A lucrative trade, for the rulers, developed in Western Europe about this time: the selling or renting of the populace to serve in other's wars - "slave trade." Our most apparent awareness of this was Britain's hiring of German soldiers in the American Revolution.

Germany in 1815

Nothing is known about the financial or political status of our particular ancestors. There may have been the average number of artisans and craftsmen among them; the likely premise is that most of them were modest people, farmers, and shepherds. It may be noted however that, even though the majority of the German people listed "farmer" as their occupation on their application for emigration and on the ship record, it does not necessarily mean they were all farmers. One immigrant listing shows farmers, vintagers, carpenters, bakers, masons, cabinet makers, shoemakers, tailors, butchers, millers, leather workers, stocking weavers, barbers, locksmiths, linen and woolen weavers, cast wrights, coopers, hunters, saddlers, hat makers, glaziers, tile makers, teachers, engravers - the working and middle class. The westward movement following the American Revolution resulted in the rise of agriculture as a leading industry in America. Previously, most people in the young colony had their personal farms, "plantations," in addition to a trade.

It comes as a surprise to some persons not involved in genealogy searching that printed records, even today but particularly early ones, are not accurate. For instance, a German-speaking person's name would not be spelled correctly by an English-speaking clerk, so name spellings evolved in the early days by sound, in many instances, with spelling variations among brothers for one reason or another. Also dates are sometimes misunderstood, miscopied, baptism dates accepted as birth dates, death and burial dates, marriage license and marriage dates, confused. Even dates carved in stone were sometimes inaccurate. In early records "Gramling" had varied spellings: Gramly(ley), Gramlich, Kramlich, Grammeling, Kramling, Grumling, etc., with some of the varied spellings appearing for the same man in different years. The Indiana censuses vary "Gramling" with "Grambling." [While compiling another book pertaining to the Palatinian area, a letter from Germany explained that German spelling underwent change about the end of seventeenth century, one of which changes was the dropping of "b" from words that had contained "mb," as in Samsel/Samsel and Grambling/Gramling. Lavina Strickler Gramling had surmised that "Grambling" was an old German spelling, rightly. With the "Samsel" name, some in the new country adopted "Sampsel."]

Isaac Gramling was born in 1805, Berks County, Pennsylvania, in Cumru Township, and married Mary Hornberger there, near Reading on the Schuylkill River. It is recorded by family that they were originally from Bucks County in Pennsylvania. When Berks County was formed in 1752, Reading became a part of this new county with no move involved by our families. When Isaac and Mary Gramling migrated to Ohio with their family, they may have used the National Road constructed during the war by the military which crossed the Alleghenies at the Cumberland Gap in Maryland, into Virginia, westward and north into Pennsylvania, then crossing into the State of Ohio. They may have traveled in the famous German-invented Conestoga Wagon, "the prairie schooner." Or, more likely, they rode canalboats on the recently constructed canal system linking Philadelphia and Pittsburgh which "were loaded atop flatcars and winched over the summit" of the mountain.

To ascertain parents for Isaac and Mary it has been necessary to search early Pennsylvania records. Whereas many of the following itmes may not pertain to our family, they may be of value to other Gramling searchers and provide material for analysis when no other records are available.

Immigrations to Pennsylvania (1709-1803)

- 6 May 1709 Soloma Gramlin (the year Queen Anne aided emigrants from the Palatinate).
 1732 Adam Gramlich of Gramling, a passenger from Rotterdam aboard "Hans Bartel," from Wolberseweiler, Germany, to Berks County, Penna., ship master, Capt. Allen, from Bavaria. [Source not relocated - an isolated entry. Could it pertain to Adam Gramling who settled in South Carolina? "Between 1745 to 1760, in the western half of the state (South Carolina), settlements were created by immigrants from the Rhine section of Germany...."]

19 Sept. 1749 Hans Adam Gramlich from Duchy of Wirtemberg, aboard "Patience" Master Hugh Steel; the ship last stopped at Cowes, Isle of Wight, England. (Wurtemberg was a Lutheran duchy.)

5 Sept. 1751 Hans Adam Gramlich aboard "Shirley."

15 Sept. 1752 Thomas Gramlich.

22 Sept. 1752 George Heinrich Gramlich.

23 Sept. 1752 Johan George Gramlich aboard "St. Andrew."

17 Sept. 1753 H. George Gramly aboard "Richard."

28 Sept. 1753 Mattheus Gramlich aboard "Halifax."

23 Sept. 1766 George Gramlich aboard "Chance."

And this rare entry from "Sower's Newspaper," [probably Christopher Sauer's] November 26, 1757, published in Philadelphia and Georgetown:

George Graomeling, from Sennfeld, near Adelsheim [Wurttemberg], arrived five years ago. His brother Jacob came in another ship, arriving in Maryland. George who lived in Skippack [Philadelphia County], at Welker's mill, seeks information about Jacob. (From German Settlers of Pennsylvania: advertisements from German newspapers, 1743-1800.)

Located Pennsylvania Records, limited, and primarily from the 18th century Pennsylvania Archives and microfilmed Early Church Records of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Bucks County (two records located)

Between 1747-1758, Heinrich Gremmeling married Catharina _____, by George Michel Weiss; step-daughter Heilig, at Goshenhoppen Church.

5 Feb. 1755, Joh. George Gramling and wife from New Goshenhoppen were present at baptism for Schilling.

A few years later than the foregoing entries, several of the name were within proximity of the Goshenhoppen Church in the later-formed counties of Lehigh, Northampton, and Montgomery with given names of Adam, George, Paul, Thomas, Valentine, Jacob, Francis, and Philip. The family in Northampton/Lehigh Counties at Bethlehem appears to have used the surname spellings of "Gramli/Kramli/Gramley," while in the same counties at Weisenberg Township, "Gramlich/Kramlich" were used.

Goshenhoppen was a tract ten miles long, five miles wide along Perkio-men Creek, upper end of Montgomery County and adjacent counties of Berks, Lehigh and Bucks. Its name was changed to "Churchtown" and, later, to "Bally." The name is thought to be of Indian derivation.

Henry

- 1764, 9 Sept. Henry and Elisabeth had daughter Maria Helena Kramlich baptised; Thomas and Magdalena Gramling, sponsors, in Oley Twp.

The church records are German Reformed or combined Lutheran-Reformed. Often the one church was shared by two congregations. Generally, Gramlings were German Reformed, now the United Church of Christ.

To analyze from the foregoing records and from the 1790 and 1830 federal censuses (no Gramlings appeared in the 1800, 1810, 1820 Pennsylvania index listings) and from recently received copies of Will and Pension record for service in "War of the Revolution" for Adam Gramlin/Gramling, born in Pennsylvania, 1757, it appears that he is a Second Generation in the American Colony and, probably, son of one of the two Hans Adam Gramlichs who immigrated 1749 and 1751, taxed between 1780-1784. On this assumption:

First Generation in the British-American Colony (not proved)

Hans Adam Gramlich - either the 1749 immigrant from Duchy of Wurtemberg OR the immigrant of the same name who took his oath on September 5, 1751, arriving on ship "Shirley."

mar. Anna Maria _____. Death rate of wives and children were very high so there may have been other marriages.

Isaac Gramling

born 1805, Berks Co., Penna., Cumru Twp. son of Adam b. 1757 PA

 Berks Co., Penna.; died 18 April 1882, bur. ibid.; daughter of John Hornberger and Leah Remp of Berks Co., Cumru Twp.
 Isaac and Mary Gramling moved from Berks County to Stark County, Ohio, Tuscarawas Twp., between 1836-1839, removing to DeKalb County, Ind., about 1849 when he settled on a track of unimproved land in the southwest quarter of Section 4, Smithfield Township, which he improved and made his home until his death... History of DeKalb Co.
 children, GRAMLING: Henry, Susan, Richard, Peter, John, William, Mary Ann, Franklin, Amanda, Eliza, and Sarah.

Stark County, where Isaac and Mary Gramling brought their young family of Henry, Susan, Richard, Peter, and John about 1837-1838, was a beautifully wooded, hilly area in the northern part of the Tuscarawas Valley where they lived for about ten years. The area was adequate for farming and excellent for cattle and sheep grazing with a wealth of minerals: coal, oil, gas, sandstone and clay. Massilon, largest village of the Tuscarawas Township, thrived on its manufacture of machinery and iron products; in addition, for its railway center. In 1848 a reservoir to provide pure drinking water and water power was completed at Sippo Lake north of the town. In fear of malaria much public outcry had arisen against the project. Soon after completion the dam was "blown up with powder" causing great loss in the industrial area of Massilon. Malaria, typhoid, diphtheria, small pox, etc., took a large toll in lives before sanitation, vaccination, disease prevention-and-education appeared. In 1832 while ditching a swamp area south of the village some laborers "from Alsace" (the Palatinate) found two mammoth tusks, each eleven feet long and twenty-seven inches in circumference at the larger end. They were removed to Philadelphia. Other such finds are said to have been made in the valley. Having been Indian lands their relics have also been found throughout the township.

For undisclosed reasons but probably because Isaac was a farmer and preferred a less industrial location, the family moved on to DeKalb County about 1849, with the older and new Ohio-born children: William, Mary Ann, and Franklin. Henry, having recently married remained in Ohio and joined

Peter Hornberger Gramling

Peter Hornberger Gramling, fourth child of Isaac Gramling and Mary Hornberger, moved from Cumru Township with his parental family to Tuscarawas Township in Stark County, Ohio, as a lad of four or five years where they remained until he was about sixteen years old, moving on to DeKalb County, Indiana. During his youth in Ohio he had worked at carpentry and became well known in Summit, DeKalb County, as a skilled carpenter and contractor and, in addition, served as a post master there. The home he built for his wife, Lavina, was moved and is being lived in near Ashley, Indiana, 1981, well over a hundred years old.

While working in Stark County, as an adult, Peter met and married Lavina Strickler. She was born February 7, 1842, at High Mount, eight miles north of Hellam, York County, Pennsylvania, near the Susquehanna River. She lived with her maternal grandmother, Anna Vought, and her grandfather since they would not allow their daughter to go with Mr. Strickler, a merchant who traveled, because she was too young. Lavina's mother later married Danny Myres (Meyers) at Hellam, ten miles west of Columbia, and she is buried near there. She was born near Columbia in Lancaster County. Lavina had seven step-brothers and sisters: Henry, Shallie (Crumbling), David, Clelland, Nathaniel, Sarah, and John Myers or Meyers. It is said that Danny Myers and Grandpa Vought owned a tavern on the turnpike.

Lavina and Peter were married April 11, 1861, by the minister of the German Reformed Church. They then went to Peter's home place, the Village of Summit, Indiana, in Smithfield Township.

Lavina Strickler Gramling was nineteen years old when she was married, forty years old when she became a widow, the mother of thirteen children.

She was ninety-one years old when she died April 1, 1933, at Summit. The account of her last illness is told in a letter from her daughter, Mary Lydia "Mel" (Gramling) Lacey.

Dear Helen,

I am rather slow to write you because mother [Lavina] took down with the flu, December 26th. She was in bed until Feb. 19th, she could then walk a few steps without support. She got out of bed Feb. 25th about midnight and fell on the floor. I heard her and how I got her back in bed, I cannot tell but I did it, somehow. She has been helpless ever since, however she did not break any bones but the shock was too much for her. Her feet swell. The Doctor said she has hardening of the arteries. I have to feed and tend her like a baby. Judge Link and wife just brought some flowers for mother. Mrs. Link and I are second cousins.

With love,

(signed) Grandmother.

"Lavina was my great-grandmother who loved children. I stayed with her in summer time. I was allowed to ride the train from Pleasant Lake to Summit, Indiana, about ten miles. In her yard were mulberry trees with both white and purple fruit and catalpa trees with seeds like beans to make flower dolls from the hollyhock blooms. Grandmother loved flowers and her perfectly kept vegetable garden always had its border of phlox, sweet williams and zinnias. Her house was so clean and well kept. We always had a linen table cloth and napkins. The cellar was cool because of the rock walls. Here the milk was kept in round crocks. It was an art to pour the cream from them without spilling any on the floor. We were not allowed to play in the huge barn built, as I found when I visited Lancaster, Pennsylvania, like the Pennsylvania Dutch barns. She had a huge stuffed water crane in the parlor and a rocking chair on a platform, covered with a beautiful red material. I was allowed to sit in this interesting room each afternoon if I had been good all morning. There was a hanging lamp with colored glass shade and a carpet with red roses woven into it.

Lavina and Peter's children were named Mary Lydia (Mel), Oliver Morton, Sherman Isaac, Susan Olivia, Wilson Henry, Lotta Mae, Carrie, Richard and the deceased infants Carl, Doris, David, Leander and one unnamed one buried in Barker Cemetery, Road 27, north of Waterloo, Indiana." (Helen Harpham Reisterer)

Margaret Gramling Leach adds to Lavina's history, ...This is what I was told.... My dear Grandmother, Lovina Strickler Gramling...was born and lived, until thirteen years old, at High Mount, about eight miles north of Hallem, York County.... In the meantime the grandparents, named Voight, moved to Springfield, Ohio and Lovina went to live with them. My grandfather, Peter Gramling, was working in Springfield, met Lovina and they were married and moved to Indiana. I have no idea what happened to the grandparents....

Pieces of her fine crochet work remain.

Mary Lydia "Mel" was a slight blonde lady, pleasant, and constantly busy either with her house work, baking, gardening, or needlework and crochet. When she married Thomas Stephen Lacey, as his third wife, she was eighteen years old, and he was thirty-nine. His first two wives had died young leaving him with four motherless children between three and thirteen years old. Mel had been assisting in the Thomas Lacey home for some time prior to and following Violet Markley Lacey's death in childbirth, the infant dying some ten days later. Thus, it followed that she would continue there, and she and Thomas Lacey married at the end of summer. His first wife was Mary Lydia's Aunt Mary, Grandfather Isaac's daughter.

Thomas had purchased land in Steuben County at Pleasant Lake, February 6, 1882, where they lived and gave the children a good life with his farming. His father, Thomas Marshall Lacey, was from Virginia and Ohio, settling in Steuben County, 1841, where he built a log house of two stories. When the house was demolished about 1930's, Faye Lacey Harpham had several wooden potato mashers (or gavels, if you wish) carved from one of the house's hardwood logs which she distributed among family as mementoes.

When Thomas died in 1915, their youngest child, Sybilla, was seventeen years old, in school or about to start school at Tri State College. I do not recall hearing about disposition of their home and farm. Mary Lydia was with her mother, Lavina, in Summit, ten miles from Pleasant Lake, when the latter had her final illness and died the following April in 1933. Mel, herself, died six years later at daughter Elfie Ritter's home in Kendalville. For a few years, after 1926, Mary Lydia lived with daughter, Clymera Stowell, who had been recently widowed, and the four grandchildren, in Seattle. Her grand-daughter Martha Stowell, does remember about cookies: they always had cookies for breakfast - not instead of but - in addition to toast. Dean Stowell remembers she had many stories and loved the garden and flowers. From available facts, it does seem her life was dedicated to the caring for others. For certain, she instilled a self-confident, caring quality in her children I have known. (Lucile Samsel Stowell)

mar. License issued 18 Sept. 1880, DeKalb Co., to Mel and Thomas S. (Stephen) Lacey; b. 9 May 1841, Seneca Co., Ohio; d. 1915, Steuben County, Indiana, by his own hand; bur. ibid. He served in the Civil War between 1862-65, 44th Indiana Regt. By his first two marriages he had four living children: Manda Lacey Clouse, William Lacey, Emmett Lacey, and Edna Lacey Stambaugh. His deceased children were Mary Effie, Cyrus E., Edwin B., and the last infant all of whom died either as young children or infants.

For persons of Lacey blood the location of emigrant William Lacey and Mary Parlett's marriage record at Newport, Isle of Wight, dated 3 March 1683/4, may be of interest. Since the time England required statistical records to be kept, about middle of 16th century, Lacey/Lacy are on record at the hillside village of Freshwater, the south-west corner of Isle of Wight, a family of schoolmasters.

To Helen credit is due for this Gramling-Hornberger genealogy. Over the years she has cheerfully collected information on this and her other family lines while traveling and found reward in the meeting and renewing acquaintance with kin. She has also spent no few hours corresponding for information and compiling the data. Since retirement Helen volunteers days on end for the Orange County California Genealogy Society's library. It is housed in the Huntington Beach Public Library. To her "thanks" are due.

Some time before 1909 Clymera and a girl friend decided to leave Pleasant Lake to try their fortune in Seattle. I do not recall the company for which she worked, but one summer, at the company picnic, she met tall, handsome, balding, thought-provoking Edward Payson Stowell and, with time, they knew their future was together. Losing the man she dearly loved presented a terrible grief, but a necessity for deep reflection to point her future direction. The four children were between seven and fourteen years of age for whose financial provision was a veteran pension and proceeds from an insurance policy.

Overall, I would describe her as very loving of her children and of cheerful optimism and gentility with a great sense of humor. When she and her sisters were together there was laughter from morning 'til night. She had good health other than troublesome eyesight so far as distance was concerned and beautiful teeth; her business school education could provide some job opportunity; her church involvement was a large part of all their lives. Clymera had a beautiful, trained singing voice which she generously shared with others, a member of her church choir, frequently singing solo parts. She also supplemented her income in a modest way by singing at weddings and other special occasions. Especially, her optimistic cheerfulness was not to be discounted. Her little mother, "Grandma Lacey," (all of the Lacey children were petite) came to live with them for a few years when Clymera found office work with the Washington Temperance Association for whom she worked until retirement which probably accounts for her family's temperate attitude toward alcohol.

Clymera was a lady, but she could also enjoy a picnic or a day at the beach with her family (had to watch that fair skin for fear of sunburn). She was essentially left-handed but, also, ambidextrous, with an ability to write from outside inward with a pencil in each hand. She made games of duties: "How many vegetables can I find to put in the soup today?" (At last count, fourteen); "I did dry the dish. It is just sweating because I dried it so fast." She was so tidy - never was her sewing machine left open overnight or the floor unswept. Each morn was greeted with a tidy home. She was an excellent cook whose homemade bread, biscuits, and rusks always drew high praise. She did not feel that children should be burdened with financial problems, consequently, only when they were older could they appreciate fully the struggle she had borne. The children all contributed: sewing, knitting, gardening, tending and preparing the chickens for the pot, chopping wood, cooking, etc., and each one found his/her small income-producing jobs in the neighborhood.

They were first and last in Seattle with intermittent years in Anchorage and California. Clymera once repeated to me Edward's remark, "The children may not think me a kind father, but they will thank me when they are grown." Martha, the baby, adored "Daddy."

Following graduation from high school at age 16, Dean worked at a variety of jobs during the depression: a paint-making business which bankrupted while he was there, a flour mill, painting underside of West Seattle bridge, etc., all of which convinced him, more than ever, that higher education was his direction, made possible by the money he had saved plus working an occasional quarter to supplement costs. As a young man he enjoyed camping and skiing; later, soft ball for quite a few years. Now he is enraptured with fishing, tying his own flies, and enjoys golf, the family dog, and his children - all children.

Jan Dean Stowell b. 23 Dec. 1949 at Montreal Quebec.

Attended schools at Montreal and Mercer Island; 3 years at Washington State University, Economics major. Jan "Harv" was buried in a sodium sulphate slide while working on a summer job at Crown Zellerbach Paper Mill at Port Townsend, Wash., 12 July 1971, the company in violation of safety standards, contrary to industries' rhetoric of "worker carelessness." He was a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity, loved by all who knew him; held a respect for and love of nature's offerings.

Sally Ann Stowell b. 19 June 1954 at Montreal, Quebec.

Attended public schools at Montreal and Mercer Island, Washington; BA degree in Political Science, Whitworth College at Spokane, 1976, Summe cum Laude; audited Irish history class at Queens Univ., Belfast.

Specializing in Irish and Celtic Studies Sally lived in Belfast, Northern Ireland, on and off during the 1970's. Her work was in the broad field of community development with special focus on peace and reconciliation efforts.

Upon returning to Seattle in December of '81 she has undertaken to further her Irish studies through teaching, writing, and advocacy for a number of the Irish peace groups in the United States.

Vocationally she has interests in small business and currently manages a mail order book service. Other interests include the buying and selling of oriental carpets, computer possibilities for sharing resources among public organizations and photography. It would also have to be said that her heart still lies in the mountains and waterways of the Pacific Northwest. Sally is creative in her life and cooking, the latter tending toward vegetarianism.

Patti Jean Stowell b. 25 April 1957 at Montreal, Quebec.

Attended public schools on Mercer Island, Wash., with one year at Tulsa, Oklahoma; 2 years at Washington State Univ., BA degree, Social Work from Univ. of Washington where she is presently at work toward her MSW; Gamma Phi Beta treasurer, 1978-79.

Once, about 1961, there was occasion to meet Olevia at Pleasant Lake. I was impressed with her forthrightness, keen mind, her fine features, and the Lacey girls' quality of gentility. Later, when compiling Thomas M. Lacey's Family, Olevia's assistance, by mail, provided the success of the book so far as Pleasant Lake statistics and whereabouts of descendants were concerned - a fountain of information or willingness to locate information. She once said that she, of all the girls, had such a good memory that she was requisitioned by her mother to bring a stored item of seasonal clothing from semi-annual storage because she could remember exactly where each item was stored. An impressive lady.

mar. 10 June 1952, Betty Ann Thielbar at Pueblo, Colo; b. 28 Dec. 1928.

Frank Michael Lacey was educated in the Fountain Colorado, schools and went on to receive his teaching degree at Colorado State, Greeley, Colorado, and his Masters Degree in Administration at Stanford University. He taught in several California communities, settling in San Luis Obispo where he has been a principal for twenty-one years.

He spends his spare time working in the yard where he grows a large variety of citrus and avocado trees. He also fishes whenever he gets a chance, catching halibut in Morro Bay and pier fishing for most anything. Last summer, he began to smoke the fish and pursued the hobby with great enthusiasm.

He and his wife are both great readers and book collectors. They live contentedly on the Central Coast, making short trips within California.

mar. 11 Aug. 1979, John Henry Rogers at San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Laura Ann Lacey Rogers displayed a deep interest in nature and beauty at an early age. She went on to obtain a degree in Art History from California State University at Hayward. Probably because of her love of nature, she began working as a florist and now owns and runs a small personal wedding flower service. Her husband is employed by the San Luis Obispo Recreation Department.

Their spare time and money is spent in travel. They have visited the Virgin Islands, Bermuda, Hawaii and have traveled extensively in California, and have great plans for future trips.

David Michael Lacey b. 1 Oct. 1957 at Redwood City, Calif.

David Michael Lacey showed a great interest in building and constructing at an early age. By the time he entered high school, he was determined to become an architect. In June of 1982 he realized this dream and graduated from California Polytechnic State University with a degree in architecture. He was hired by the Austin Company in Irvine, California, a large design-build company.

His spare time activities have included back-packing and fly-fishing. He constructs his own poles and ties the flies.

mar. Lloyd J. Beecher b. 1899; d. 1958 at Mt. Vernon, Wash; a printer.

1 child, BEECHER: Stanley 1924-1927.

"Auntie Bill" was a very special person to those close to her (not too many people have been privileged to have an aunt named "Bill"). With nephews Dean and James Stowell the eyes have always reflected light of love at her mention. She and Lloyd were in Alaska during World War II, she with the Corps of Engineers, Construction Division from 1940 through mid-1947. She thrived on the work and consistently earned excellent performance ratings.
She resigned to work with Lloyd in his printing business at Anchorage. They enjoyed life and each other with many hobbies: shell and stone collecting, travel, golf, photography - they had extensive slides and photos of Alaska.
She once expressed that their relationship was unique - beyond the average marriage - he liked yellow curtains at the kitchen window; they had yellow curtains at the kitchen window. After retirement they moved from Alaska to Mt. Vernon, Washington, where he died, suddenly. Soon afterward she sold their home and moved to Seattle in Alki near sister Clymera. Clymera's last few years were as pleasant as possible with Billie's daily loving care of her at the nursing home. Billie also spent her last few years in a retirement-nursing home in West Seattle.

Sybilla Lacey Beecher was an animated, fun-loving, generous, and loving person. In 1958 she demonstrated to the children her hoola hoop expertise:
a circle of plastic tubing about thirty inches in diameter, rotated around the hips. She was a self-proclaimed "tom boy," mentioning odd bits of mischief in which she and brother, Keith, participated when young. Being the youngest of the large family raised by mother, Mary Lydia, she and Keith could have had an enjoyable companionship. Billie disclaimed any knowledge of genealogy or family, stating the others had left home before she was grown and that she was away at school other parts of the time: Tri State College at Angola, Ind., 1916-1917, Bellingham Teachers College, Washington State, 1922-1924, business college at Longview, Washington, where she completed "Higher Accounting." She was 5' tall.

HORNBERGER GENEALOGY

The oldest known records of the Hornbergers (Hornburgs) were found in the parish register of the St. Nicolai Parish of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Gifhorn. Today Gifhorn is a city of about 15,000 population, located in northern Germany approximately fifty miles from the city of Hanover. The area around Gifhorn has been described as a very marshy region and the Hornburgs have been mentioned as being from the "Moor Colonies." In the Gifhorn church register are recorded many Hornburg births, marriages and deaths, dating from ca.1730 when Eberhard Hornburg was born at Vechelde of unrecorded parentage.

"Burg," in German, means a fortress or castle. "Berg," in German, means hill or mountain. Hamburg, Germany, is near the mouth of the Elbe River which rises in Czechoslovakia and flows north-westward through Germany. Since travel in early history was usually along water routes, the Hornburg family near Hanover probably arrived at Gifhorn from some location near the Elbe River. Had this family been related to the Palatinian Hornberger family, it is questionable they would have used this route, unless they were of an earlier migration into the northern or north-eastern area and changed the name spelling accordingly. The suffix "er" in the "Hornberger" spelling indicates "from," probably from a hill or mountain shaped like a horn.

The parentage of Mary Hornberger, born 1808, who married Isaac Gramling in Pennsylvania, had been unknown until location of this marriage record at the Schwartzwald Church, Berks County, Exeter Township, Pennsylvania, the 1781-1811 record of Rev. John William Boos:

11 August 1805, Johannes Hornberger and Leah Rein of Cumru Township.

Her surname is erroneously spelled; it should be "Remp." The proof that this marriage record applies to our ancestors appears in two separate county histories: one in Stark County, Ohio, and the other in DeKalb County, Indiana. The first, Emanuel Hornberger...the son of John Hornberger and Leah Remp.... This biographical sketch recalls that John (Johannes) Hornberger came west to Massillon, located on the Tuscarawas River in the Allegheny Plateau region of Ohio in 1835, where he purchased eighty acres in the S.E. $\frac{1}{4}$ of Section 23. He died in 1851. John and Leah's children are listed: (Publication date was 1881.)

Benjamin Hornberger [Born between 1800-1810, Berks Co., Cumru Twp. Penna. - 1830 census; d. before 1881; mar. Marey Gramling.]
 Mary "Polly" Hornberger married Isaac Gramling and live in DeKalb County. [Born 11 May 1808 in Pennsylvania - family record.]
 Elizabeth Hornberger married Mr. Boon. [Died before 1881.]
 Susan Hornberger married John Lichley and live in Sandusky County.
 John Hornberger [Died before 1881.]
 Isaac Hornberger lives in DeKalb County, Ind. [Born 25 Feb. 1824, Pennsylvania.]
 Emanuel Hornberger born 15 Oct. 1812 in Lancaster County, Penna., married Annie Hurdman, native of Lancaster County, daughter of Theophilus Hurdman. The history further reveals that he was a a farmer who, in 1881, owned his father's land which he had increased to 273 acres. He came to Stark County in 1837, two years after his father's arrival. Emanuel's children:

Eliza Hullinger (William) of Perry Twp., Ohio.

Caroline Collier (Joseph) of DeKalb Co., Ind.

Elias Hornberger died 1875 leaving 4 children.

Samuel on farm home.

Harriet Overderf (Hiram).

Lewis Hornberger.

Annie Umbehour (Frank) of Massillon.

[William Hornberger may also have been John and Leah's son: born between 1800-1810, as enumerated in Pennsylvania's 1830 census at Cumru Twp., Berks Co.]

Isaac N. Hornberger, son of John and Leah Hornberger, in the DeKalb Co. Indiana, history, has a biographical sketch wherein is stated that he is son of John Hornberger and Leah Remp; that he moved to Stark County at age ten years. He married Lucinda Lehman, 25 December 1848, and moved to DeKalb County in 1850 where he owned 150 acres. Children:

Nancy C. Koelt

Mary A. Mann

Belle E. Swinford

John P. Hornberger married Laura Weeks

Susannah Sherwood

Anna A. Hornberger

Myrtle J. Hornberger.

The related Hornberger, Remp and Gramling families all lived in the general area of Cumru Township, Berks County, Pennsylvania, with several marriages among them, creating double cousins. The three families migrated west to Stark County, Ohio, within a few years of each other, about 1835-1840. Jacob Remp was enumerated in the 1790 census of Berks County, Cumru Township, perhaps Leah's father.

Isaac Gramling and Mary Hornberger married in Pennsylvania and moved to Stark County, Ohio, Tuscarawas Township, between 1836 and 1839 with their children Henry, Susan, Richard, Peter and John. William, Mary Ann and Franklin were born in Ohio. About 1849 the family moved to DeKalb County, Indiana, where Isaac and Mary Gramling lived to the end of their days.

Two other Hornberger marriages from the Schwartzwald Church records, which church served the surrounding area including Brecknok Township and Cocalico Township in Lancaster County, point to a likely brother and sister of Johannes (John), based on their location in Cumru Township:

22 May 1804, Martin Hornberger and Anna Schneider, Cumru Twp.

14 January 1805, Catharina Hornberger and Gottfried Schmidt, Cumru Twp.

Turning to records of Cumru Twp., Berks Co., for a father of Johannes, Martin, and Catharina, one man (and only one at the earliest time) appears there, Christian Hornberger.

1768, Christian Hornberger taxed. Pennsylvania Archives.

Other entries for Christian Hornberger in contiguous counties could very well be for the same man or his son. Please bear in mind that Berks County was not formed until 1752, from surrounding counties, and that public communication was slow enough that it may have taken a few years for all residents to recognize their county's name had been changed.
